Significance

HerCheck NIPT (Non-Invasive Prenatal Testing) is a safe test done during pregnancy to screen for common genetic conditions in the baby, such as Down syndrome (Trisomy 21), Trisomy 18 (Edward Syndrome) and Trisomy 13 (Patau Syndrome). This method involves the analysis of cell-free fetal DNA (cffDNA) circulating in maternal blood, without any risk to the fetus. This screening test can be done as early as 10 weeks of pregnancy and provides highly accurate results, helping parents and doctors make informed decisions about further care.
